WHY USE PLASTICS PACKAGING?

Several simple properties have made plastics packaging an invaluable material for processing, storing, transporting, protecting and preserving products. These include the following:

Resource Efficiency
The use of plastics packaging minimises the amount of material used in packaging ensuring maximum protection with minimum material. The design freedom made possible with plastics permits an almost infinite variety of packaging - thick or thin, rigid or flexible.

Lightweightness
Plastics packaging saves energy as it requires less fuel to manufacture and transport than some other packaging materials.

Cost Effectiveness
Plastics packaging is often more economic to produce in custom-made forms and, because it offers longer life protection for perishable products, it also reduces waste and dependency on preservatives and therefore cuts costs.

Environmental Soundness
Efficient in its use of resources as well as saving energy in service, plastics packaging is recyclable and is being recycled in increasing quantities.

Hygiene and Safety
Protecting sensitive products such as food and medicines, plastics packaging protects against contamination and helps prevent the spread of harmful germs during manufacture, distribution and display. Tamper-proof closures give added security.

Transparency
Plastics packaging allows consumers to view and inspect products without handling, thereby cutting down on bruising and other damage.

Durability and Practicality
Plastics packaging is shatter-proof therefore reducing accidents. As well as being safer, it also saves wastage from damage.
