REACH And The Plastics Processor: Practical Advice For Your Business

Thursday 29th November 2007

Chemicals North West, Runcorn, Cheshire

REACH legislation came into force on 1 June 2007 and the changes it brings will have a profound impact on plastics processors. Under the system for the Registration, Evaluation and Authorisation of Chemicals, companies must complete a complex set of obligations to comply with the regulations. This seminar will show you how.

Key questions, which will be addressed in this seminar:

♦ Do you know what you have to do to ensure that your business complies with REACH?
♦ Do you realise the implications REACH will have on your customers and what your customers will expect from you?
♦ Should you nominate a REACH expert on your staff?
♦ How do you develop a successful strategy to deal with REACH?
The subjects covered in this seminar are crucial, I still don’t believe all have grasped the serious implications for their business. REACH is now upon us!

Seminar Outline

REACH is potentially one of the most influential and complicated pieces of legislation to hit the plastics sector. This programme draws together experts from across Europe to address the impact that this significant change in EU regulation will have upon the plastics supply chain and all plastics applications in the UK. The seminar is focussed specifically on how these changes will effect the plastics processor.

Key challenges will be highlighted and discussed. Time is allowed for networking and general discussion.

Who Should Attend:

This will be of interest to all companies in plastics processing in its widest sense including plastics raw materials producers, compounders, distributors, masterbatch manufacturers, additive manufacturers and recyclers. The event is structured for sales, marketing and product development professionals, regulatory and quality management as well as senior management.
