In the last 5 years the number of plastics companies in the UK has decreased by over 15%. Many of these companies disappeared because of cash flow and debt collection problems as there is often an inability to get the right balance between the sales and financial functions. Sometimes failure results from inaccurate credit scoring, a lack of understanding of the legal tools available or inadequate insurance.

This seminar sets out to explain the importance of credit management for plastics companies and how to deploy it to the greatest possible effect in your business.

Topics will include:

- Achieving the right balance between credit and sales
- Confidential Invoice Discounting
- Innovative export credit schemes and debt collecting in overseas markets
- Credit scoring and when to be sceptical about the warnings
- Legal tools available to recover debts
- The importance of insuring against credit risk

This interactive seminar is aimed at anyone responsible for credit management in a plastics business from finance to sales

Seminar Outline
The seminar is designed to give the attendees a thorough overview of the key issues of credit management, with an insight into the best way to manage credit, assess credit risk and the legal steps you should take should you not get paid. This seminar will demonstrate that through a thorough understanding of credit management and by implementing relatively marginal improvements in policy, organisation and training, substantial dividends can be obtained in terms of business expansion on a secure basis.

Who Should Attend?
This interactive seminar is aimed at anyone responsible for credit management and credit control, such as Financial Directors, Credit Managers and and anyone involved in collection. It will also give key sales personnel a comprehensive understanding of credit issues when they are dealing with customers.
